Physician Owner Specialization

Our Services .. New Highs in 2019

FOCUS Healthcare specializes in investment banking services focused on mergers & acquisitions involving clinicians. We represent physician groups in transactions with private equity and ASC management company investors across the United States.

We are a leading expert on this market and its participants. This White Paper is designed to share those insights with you – physician owners with valuable practices and ASCs contemplating their own transactions with private equity.

As former operators, we understand the unique attributes of specialty practices and surgery centers. We invest our time and money in the best data available and our partners constantly track transaction activity, conduct independent research, and analyze critical issues. We represent physicians every day and leverage the resulting experience and relationships to benefit our clients.

We Specialize in Second and Third Wave PPM

We focus on the emerging second and third wave sectors across the full spectrum of physician practices.

The Next Frontier for Private Equity

Most physicians are aware of private equity’s massive investments in ophthalmology and dermatology practices. As of February 2019, 22 firms were investing in ophthalmology and 29 in dermatology. Additional players are waiting on the sidelines for the right opportunity to enter the market. Over a hundred ophthalmology private equity transactions have occurred, and even more in dermatology.

At the same time, investors are eyeing other specialties of interest. Common themes include relative insulation from economic forces, strong supply and demand forecasts, and compelling technological and regulatory developments – such as outpatient total joint replacements. Investors have emerged in gastroenterology, urology, women’s health, allergy & asthma, podiatry, and others. In our opinion, no emerging specialty is of higher interest to investors than orthopedics.

Private equity can add the most value in changing environments. We believe that orthopedics, perhaps more than other specialties, is at a point in its evolution that will greatly benefit from private equity investment.

As of early 2019, twelve private equity firms have participated in major investments in orthopedic and spine practices ... 6 as LEAD investors and 6 as participating investors. Though a very separate specialty, we include neurosurgery in this report due to the fact that investor interest thus far has centered around heavily spine-focused neurosurgery practices. That overlap between orthopedic and neurosurgical specialists within spine, to us, is a compelling reason to view these groups as part of the same investment wave.

Private Equity Firms Investing in Orthopedics and Neurosurgery

In addition to the PE firms already investing, we have discussed the orthopedic space with many other firms eager to enter this market. Some already have similar investments in other specialties, in ambulatory surgery centers, or elsewhere in healthcare services. All see the compelling story of orthopedics.

We believe orthopedics is of interest to private equity primarily for the following reasons –

Strong Practice Profiles

The orthopedic landscape has a healthy population of large practices with ancillary revenue sources and strong management teams. These groups make excellent initial “platform” investments for private equity firms. They serve as the foundation for growth and add-on acquisitions of smaller practices within a regional market.

Aging Population

Like many specialties, orthopedics benefits from a population aging into spine, joint, and other types of major orthopedic care. Lifestyle factors are a secondary factor expected to further increase patient volumes.

Robust Ancillary Revenue Sources

Orthopedic practices benefit from a strong suite of ancillary revenue sources including ambulatory surgery centers, surgical hospitals, physical therapy, imaging, and more.

Technology and Migration to Outpatient Settings

Orthopedics is expected to benefit from new technology and regulatory change allowing additional procedures in the outpatient setting. Those changes have the potential to increase patient volumes, improve cost efficiencies, and enable further value-based payment initiatives (discussed below).

Alternative Payment Models

The additional risks, rewards, and longer care episodes (e.g., rehabilitation) contemplated by alternative payment initiatives represent an excellent opportunity for private equity firms. In partnering with premier orthopedic groups, investors can deploy the capital and financial expertise needed to maximize value-based payment programs.

In sum, the future requires orthopedists to see more patients in a more complex environment. Fortunately, that landscape also offers great opportunity. Private equity’s vision is to help orthopedic groups meet these challenges, offering greater rewards to physicians and their patients.

Platform Growth and Market Development

The PPM Management Company Strategy

The predominant private equity acquisition strategy is best defined as “Platform-Growth”. Executing this strategy with success requires the acquisition of a large practice or practices which act as a foundation. Those platforms are expanded through “Add-On” acquisitions of medium and small practices and ASCs within a geographic region.

We consider large practice acquisitions to be the key driver of market expansion and a primary indicator of future investment in medium and small practices in a geographic area. A platform practice is defined by a variety of factors, determined in part by the buyer’s preferences. Our market analysis simplifies this and considers the acquisition of practices with five or more physicians. We feel this is a strong indicator of overall platform acquisition activity.

Orthopedics and Neurosurgery

Private equity interest in orthopedic and neurosurgery practices is in the early stage. To-date, only six platform acquisitions have occurred. However, market fundamentals and increasing interest in this specialty suggests continued growth momentum in 2019 as more firms enter, new geographies and platform practices are pursued, and add-ons to existing platforms are sought.

Private Equity Investors in Orthopedics

Private equity firms usually create a subsidiary Practice Management Company within their portfolios to acquire and manage gastroenterology practices and ancillary businesses. Most transactions include some equity ownership in that parent management company.

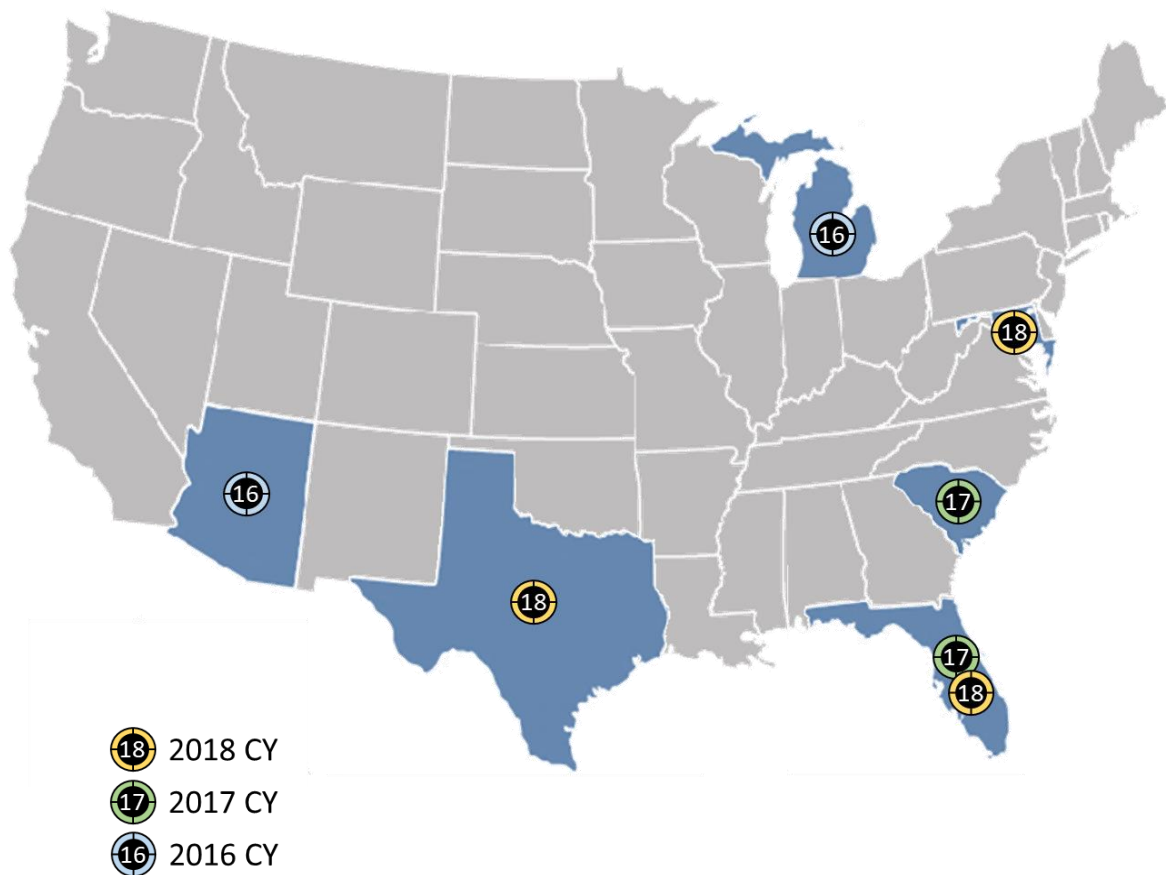

The combination of the private equity firm names and the new practice management company names can be confusing and is simplified below.

Geographic Investment Activity

The map below depicts the development status of the private equity/orthopedic and neurosurgery consolidation that began with one private equity firm's pioneering investment in 2016. Today there are twelve private equity firms actively investing in orthopedics and neurosurgery practices with varying strategies and geographic target areas.

The map below shows the early investment activity across the United States by state and year. The success of these early investment will drive increased activity. As can be seen, there are many opportunity areas available to firms seeking to enter this specialty. Those that have already entered will be evaluating their current and future success probability and seeking to grow if that outlook is promising.

Private Equity Investor Profiles

ABOUT THE COMPANY

The CORE Institute aims to offer excellent patient care across the entire orthopedics and neurosciences spectrum. Notably, CORE is a leader in payor-reform initiatives and works closely with payors and third parties to facilitate new iterations of value-based care. The company is also deeply engaged in the research and development of care management protocols and associated software.

GROWTH PROSPECTS

We expect The CORE Institute to grow organically and via acquisition. That activity will include new practice partnerships and the development of new technology and payment systems.
